

MINISTRY TRAINING

Friday 26th August

Session 1 Leading Change for Maximum Effectiveness – Karl Faase

2:00pm - 3:30pm Leading change is a strategic part of any pastoral leader's role. Done well, it can open up new life for a church as it seeks to fulfil God's vision for its work in the world. Done badly, it can wound both leader and followers. This workshop will examine ways to lead change as a pastor so that maximum impact for the Kingdom is possible.

Forming new communities of faith – Stephen Bartlett

Planting new communities of faith is an important way of reaching the world with the gospel. In the light of our ongoing emphasis on church planting as a Baptist movement, this workshop takes a 'behind the scenes' look at the why and how of planting new churches.

So who are you married to? - David Kerr

Pastoral ministry can be dangerous territory for clergy marriages. But that need not be the case. Led by an experienced pastor and relational counsellor, this workshop for pastors and their spouses will explore practical ways clergy marriages can thrive.

Burnout, rust out or workout? Thriving in the pressures of pastoral leadership - Heidi Saundercock

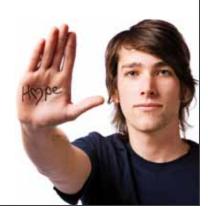

Based on recent research of contemporary Australian pastors, many of them Baptists, this workshop will look at factors that assist pastors to not just cope but grow stronger in the swirl of pastoral responsibilities. It will address issues of stress, burnout and protective strategies to enable pastors and their families to thrive.

Passing the Baton: Finding and Developing Fresh Christian Leadership - Ken Clendinning

This workshop explores how we as pastors and churches might identify and invest in those who we discern as potential pastoral leaders. How and when is the time to send them off for more specialised training and equipping?'

Pastors, Power and Healthy Congregational Ministry Pt 1 – Tim Dyer

Power is multi-faceted. Pastors may deny they have it, sometimes abuse it, and often misunderstand it. They may also be damaged by its misuse in the local congregation. How pastors handle power is critical for their own and their family's well being, the effectiveness of the congregations they serve and the work of the Kingdom. This workshop will examine power and its use, practically and theoretically, from a biblical and systems perspective.

MINISTRY TRAINING

Friday 26th August

Session 2 4:00pm – 5:30pm

Session 2 Forming new communities of faith (Repeated) – Stephen Bartlett

Planting new communities of faith is an important way of reaching the world with the gospel. In the light of our ongoing emphasis on church planting as a Baptist movement, this workshop takes a 'behind the scenes' look at the why and how of planting new churches.

So who are you married to? (Repeated) – David Kerr

Pastoral ministry can be dangerous territory for clergy marriages. But that need not be the case. Led by an experienced pastor and relational counsellor, this workshop for pastors and their spouses will explore practical ways clergy marriages can thrive.

Burnout, rust out or workout? Thriving in the pressures of pastoral leadership (Repeated) – Heidi Saundercock

Based on recent research of contemporary Australian pastors, many of them Baptists, this workshop will look at factors that assist pastors to not just cope but grow stronger in the swirl of pastoral responsibilities. It will address issues of stress, burnout and protective strategies to enable pastors and their families to thrive.

Passing the Baton: Finding and Developing Fresh Christian Leadership (Repeated) – Ken Clendinning

This workshop explores how we as pastors and churches might identify and invest in those who we discern as potential pastoral leaders. How and when is the time to send them off for more specialised training and equipping?'

Pastors, Power and Healthy Congregational Ministry Pt 2 – Tim Dyer

Power is multi-faceted. Pastors may deny they have it, sometimes abuse it, and often misunderstand it. They may also be damaged by its misuse in the local congregation. How pastors handle power is critical for their own and their family's well being, the effectiveness of the congregations they serve and the work of the Kingdom. This workshop will examine power and its use, practically and theoretically, from a biblical and systems perspective.

